

OAK ISLAND: NO PROGRESS

OAK ISLAND — No progress has been made in digging for the legendary buried treasure of Oak Island in the last few days, Robert Dunfield said Wednesday.

The operation has been shut down for the last few days and we haven't made any progress," said Dunfield, a Los Angeles petroleum geologist who arrived on this 123-acre island this summer to carry on the treasure hunt that began more than 170 years ago.

Several mechanical problems have been experienced, including trouble with a water pump, the working of the large crane and a generator.
